Ilkka Paananen and Niklas Zennström join the jury for The Bank of Åland's Baltic Sea Project

Ilkka Paananen, CEO for the gaming company Supercell, joins the Baltic Sea Project's jury for digital innovations. Skype co-founder Niklas Zennström joined the jury earlier this autumn. This year, the Baltic Sea Project provides a total of 400.000 euros in funding for projects that help the Baltic Sea. The project also launches a new category for digital innovations.

Ilkka Paananen joins the expert jury for The Bank of Åland's Baltic Sea Project. The Bank of Åland has funded projects that support a cleaner Baltic Sea since 1997, and the Baltic Sea Project now challenges the public for the first time to participate in the environmental efforts through digital innovations. The Bank of Åland recently launched the Åland Index, a digital tool that measures the environmental impact of one's purchases.

- Environmental protection is so much more than just regulation and technical solutions. Anyone can use their own expertise to share ideas to protect the Baltic Sea. Only the sky is the limit when it comes to digital innovations, and it is an honour to have such a pioneers as Ilkka Paananen and Niklas Zennström with us, Anne-Maria Salenius, Director for The Bank of Åland, Finland and chair for the Baltic Sea Project jury says.

Ilkka Paananen will evaluate project ideas with other jury members, such as Skype co-founder Niklas Zennström. Paananen grew up by the coast, and a cleaner Baltic Sea is a dear issue for him.

- The Baltic Sea is in critical condition, but there is always hope. We need new ideas for environmental protection, and grand visions can bring great results, Ilkka Paananen says.

- Today, we have tremendous opportunities to use technology to solve many of the problems that we have long known. This region has the capacity to be world leader in responsible, innovative solutions to challenges in water quality. For that to happen, we need to join forces with others, and this award is a great platform to do that, Niklas Zennström says.
